

For Spring 2008, Itamar Moses's The Four of Us will be the main point of connection between these spheres of our students' experience. Students' work on the dramatic text will help develop their critical reading skills, their ability to analyze texts of all kinds, and their writing skills. Additionally, the play will serve as the basis for enrichment and social activities, and will provide an opportunity for students to experience professional theatre in Lowell. Engagement with the Common Text and participation in related programming will foster students' enthusiasm for their intellectual and social development and expose them to the cultural life of our campus and the city.
